MY DRIVE

My drive consists of enthusiasm and inquisitiveness.

I'm always eager to learn and I value experience. I believe in reward for effort. Therefore I'll always have the needed perseverance on my projects.

I'm that kind of person who loves to socialise with the new people I meet. I try to make the best of every situation. Enthusiasm is my greatest forte. I'm eager to meet new challenges and I love to grow in my field of study.

Due to my internship in India and my love for travelling I gained a lot of international experiences. This is combination with my presentation skills would make me a great salesman and I want to find a job that embodies my passion for presenting.

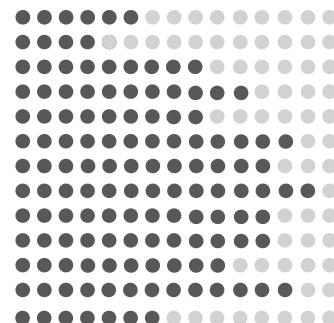

In general, but now used to state my programming stance, I believe that the key is in the details, and I'd rather work longer on a program but make it as it should.

International Experiences

My internship was set in Chandigarh University, in Gharuan, Punjab, India.

I spend nearly five months there as a teacher in various fields, going from .NET development to Linux Workshops. From presentations in a auditorium to hands-on practical in class.

The internship and all the adventures I went through changed me as a person. I tend to be more resistant to stress now that I mastered the Indian spirit and I learned how to manage with less. A wonderful experience but not always that beautiful. You really learn 'ad hoc' / live decision making when you're teaching programming techniques while working in a school were power cuts are more frequent than windows updates.

Not all experiences were pleasant and surely not all were as I expected but I sure learned valuable lessons. My presentation skills and self-image are better than ever before. Being a teacher also teaches you how to handle yourself in front of a group and it takes the nerves away.

Living a long period in a third-world country changes you and yes, it's for the better. I came to india with the wish to help the locals and I returned a richer man. Not physically, but mentally.

Find a job that you love and you'll never work a day in your life.

Meet the Person - My Vision

Whats makes Esteban, ... Esteban?

My vision for the future doesn't contain the cliche 'money', 'fame', 'fancy car' and whatnot.

During my internship in India I learned to follow your dreams and I tend to live my life so that I can spend my life living. Being happy is my most important drive.

For me, IT - Programming & Networking embodies just that. It makes me happy, it thrives me and whenever I can find a solution to a logical problem, I feel happiness. Finding the most efficient and logical way to arrange backend code or setup a network makes my heart beat faster.

I'm living to be challenged and I tend not to settle for less. I do not search for an easy job that will earn me easy money. I want to spend my life learning and I'm searching for a job that pushes me to my capacity in the field that I'm good at.

Speaking in front of groups, doing presentations, logical programming and networking. Give me a challenge and I guarantee to give you a result.
